Possibly the largest range of legal 80 channel CB's available in the UK. With the exception of the odd radio that we have found to be unreliable, we stock every CB radio that is legal in the UK. Because of the small difference in manufacturing costs, no manufacturer now makes 40 channel radios for the UK, all are now either 80 channel or "multistandard".

1) Cost. Buying a CB radio won't break the bank, most CB's are less than £100, in fact the cheapest is only £59.99. When purchasing a CB radio most people believe that the more expensive the radio the better the range. However this is not true. CB radios in the UK have the same output power (4 watts) so the range mostly depends on which ...

The Status CB-1s are chunky full-size headphones, a little like an affordable (and wired) take on the B&O H4, the Beats Dr Dre Studio or Sony MDR-1000X. You get a lot of headphone for minimal cash. Put them on, though, and you'll find the Status CB-1s are a little out of step with current headphone design trends.

CB radios often conjure up the image of truckers talking to each while at the wheel of their respective vehicles, but since the CB licence was scrapped in 2006 they have grown in popularity. CB stands for Citizens Band and a CB radio can be useful for people who do a lot of driving, such as farmers at work, couriers and taxi drivers.
